Machinery & HDT

April peak season sales beat, price hikes and fireside chats support bullish outlook; global read-throughs from CAT/CMI

April data and recent management commentary reinforce our conviction in a robust upcycle for China's machinery and HDT sectors. Industry excavator and loader sales beat expectations, with domestic and export demand both delivering double-digit growth. Leading OEMs – including Sany Heavy, XCMG and Liugong – have announced coordinated price hikes, signaling a healthier competitive environment and improved industry fundamentals. Fireside chats with Sany (8 May) and XCMG (7 May) highlight a constructive domestic outlook, ongoing price discipline and accelerating international expansion, with electrification and mining equipment emerging as powerful new growth engines. HDT sales extended their strong YTD momentum, with April volumes up 43% Y/Y and YTD sales up 23% Y/Y, while LNG HDT penetration rose above 37% and electric HDT penetration held at 25-30%. Global peers Caterpillar (30 April) and Cummins (5 May), both covered by J.P. Morgan US Machinery Analyst Tami Zakaria, reported strong Q1 results, raising full-year outlooks and highlighting resilient machinery demand, robust AIDC/data center growth and a positive read-through for China's HDT and construction machinery cycles.

Stock view: Our stock views and preference order remain unchanged, and recent share price moves reinforce our conviction in the sector's leaders. Weichai Power is our top pick, having delivered strong YTD gains (+121% H, +95% A) on the back of robust earnings, margin expansion and its AIDC/data center engine story. Sany Heavy and XCMG follow, both benefiting from global expansion, electrification and mining exposure, with Sany's shares up modestly YTD and XCMG consolidating after a strong 2025. Hengli Hydraulic remains preferred for its robotics and automation optionality, while Zhejiang Dingli remains our least preferred pick, despite a recent rebound, given limited near-term catalysts and ongoing volatility. The sector's recent underperformance (with the exception of Weichai Power) vs. global peers – Caterpillar (+57% YTD), Cummins (+33% YTD) and the MSCI World Industrial Index (+12% YTD) – is not justified by fundamentals, in our view. We expect renewed investor focus on operational execution and structural growth drivers as policy clarity, pricing power and global demand recovery play out through 2026.

Fireside chat takeaways: Sany Heavy (8 May) and XCMG (7 May) highlight robust demand, pricing discipline and global expansion as common themes

- Both Sany Heavy and XCMG management teams delivered constructive outlooks for 2026, emphasizing c.10% domestic growth, ongoing price hikes and a focus on electrification and mining equipment. International expansion remains a key strategic priority, with both companies reporting strong export growth in Africa, Southeast Asia and Latin America. Margin expansion and cash flow improvement are common themes, as both companies reported higher gross margins and strong Op-CF in Q1 despite FX headwinds and raw material cost pressures.

- Both companies expect further improvement in 2026, driven by infrastructure projects, equipment renewal and a stabilizing property market. Sany also noted that Q2 is poised to be the highest revenue and profit quarter of the year, with concentrated deliveries in cranes and continued strength in excavators and road machinery.
- Both Sany and XCMG are actively raising prices in the domestic market, with Sany implementing a 5% price hike on excavators effective 15 May and XCMG raising prices by 3-5% from 1 June. Management emphasized that this coordinated move reflects a more rational competitive environment and a commitment to sustainable growth as companies seek to balance profitability with long-term industry health.
- International expansion is a key strategic focus, with Sany reporting Q1 overseas excavator sales up 18% Y/Y and overseas gross margin exceeding 40%. XCMG highlighted Q1 export growth of 24% and April export growth above 40%, with Africa, Southeast Asia and Latin America as the strongest regions. Both companies are investing in local manufacturing, service networks and financial solutions to capture market share in mining and infrastructure projects abroad.
- Electrification and mining equipment are emerging as powerful new growth engines, with Sany's overseas electrification revenue up over 30% Y/Y in Q1 and XCMG reporting strong demand for electric and large mining equipment. Both companies are ramping up investment in next-generation products to meet rising demand in both domestic and international markets. Sany's Q1 overseas electrification revenue now accounts for over 10% of total overseas sales, while XCMG's mining equipment orders in Australia have reached c.US$2B.

April excavator and loader sales beat expectations, reinforcing the sector's resilience and global competitiveness

- April excavator industry sales reached 28,745 units, up 30% Y/Y, underscoring sustained demand during the post-peak season. Domestic excavator sales surged to 16,920 units (+35% Y/Y), marking a clear beat vs. market forecasts and signaling a healthy recovery in local construction activity. This robust domestic performance is likely supported by ongoing infrastructure projects, stabilizing property-related demand and favorable policy tailwinds. Export excavator sales also remained solid, rising 23% Y/Y, to 11,825 units, further reinforcing the sector's global competitiveness and diversified growth profile.
- Loader sales in April mirrored the positive excavator trend, with industry volumes climbing to 15,432 units (+32% Y/Y). Domestic loader sales grew 17%, to 8,411 units, reflecting steady demand in the local market, while export loader sales rose 57% a strong Y/Y, to 7,021 units. The outsized export growth highlights the sector's ability to capture international opportunities and offset any domestic softness, as global demand for construction machinery remains resilient. The loader segment's export performance is particularly noteworthy, suggesting that Chinese manufacturers continue to strengthen their presence in overseas markets and benefit from favorable trade dynamics.

- China's construction machinery sector has maintained its upward trajectory YTD, with both excavator and loader sales sustaining double-digit growth. The domestic excavator sales beat in April was especially significant, as it demonstrated the industry's capacity to deliver above-plan results even after the traditional peak season. Export momentum remains a key driver for both product categories, validating the industry's strategic focus on international markets and reinforcing the sector's positive outlook for the remainder of 2026.

Price increases by leading OEMs signal a healthier competitive environment and improved industry fundamentals

- Leading Chinese construction machinery OEMs (based on excavator sales volume market share in FY25) – including Sany Heavy, XCMG and Liugong – recently announced price increases ranging 3-5% for excavators. Sany Heavy will implement a 5% price hike effective 15 May, XCMG will raise prices 3-5% starting 1 June, and Liugong will increase prices 5% from 20 May. This coordinated move reflects growing confidence in market fundamentals and a commitment to sustainable growth as companies seek to balance profitability with long-term industry health.
- The primary drivers behind these price adjustments are cited as continued raw material cost pressures – particularly steel – and a notable recovery in domestic market demand, though we note that these Chinese machinery companies have been actively pursuing cost-reduction initiatives. As raw material prices remain elevated, OEMs are looking to pass through the higher input costs to end products, while the rebound in infrastructure investment and the ongoing equipment replacement cycle provide a solid foundation for price increases. This environment supports a more rational pricing strategy and reinforces the sector's positive outlook.
- We believe this round of price increases marks a healthy correction in the industry's competitive landscape, fostering a more sustainable and robust ecosystem for all stakeholders. The shift toward higher pricing power is expected to support margin expansion, improve industry profitability and underpin long-term growth, benefiting both manufacturers and investors as the sector continues to evolve.

HDT sales extend robust momentum YTD, with April marking another strong month for the sector

- China's HDT market continued to deliver impressive results in April 2026, with monthly sales reaching 125k units, up 43% Y/Y. Cumulative HDT sales for the first four months hit 434k units (+23% Y/Y), reflecting a strong acceleration from last year and highlighting the combined impact of post-CNY seasonality, ongoing fleet renewal and resilient export demand. The sector's ability to sustain this momentum into the second quarter underscores the effectiveness of policy support and the underlying strength of replacement cycles, even as the market navigates a more complex macro backdrop.
- LNG HDT penetration surged in April as favorable oil-gas price dynamics continued to drive segment outperformance. LNG HDT sales nearly doubled Y/Y, with segment penetration rising above 37%. The persistent oil-gas price gap through most of April, driven by elevated oil prices and relatively stable gas prices in China, further enhanced the cost advantage of LNG trucks and supported robust replacement demand. However, the late-April uptick in LNG prices started to erode this economic advantage, particularly in northern markets, where diesel prices at private stations are now comparable. We expect this narrowing price difference to weigh on LNG HDT sales in May, but we view LNG HDT as a structural growth driver, supported by ongoing fleet modernization and favorable policy tailwinds.
- Electric HDT sales maintained high Y/Y growth in April, but penetration rates remained in line with the post-subsidy period (June-December 2025). Electric HDT penetration ranged 25-30% in the first four months of 2026, similar to the June-December 2025 period, when the China IV subsidy program boosted e-HDT sales. The high Y/Y growth rate of over 60% in April was due mainly to the low base, as the China IV subsidy kicked in only from June of last year. Sequentially, the segment's acceleration reflects both strong peak season demand and the anticipation of new policy incentives, with further upside likely as local implementation of the 2026 trade-in program rolls out in the coming weeks.
- Export data for April confirm that global demand remains a key pillar of strength for China's HDT sector. Export HDT sales rose over 35% Y/Y, supported by robust logistics and mining demand across Asia, Africa and Latin America. While export volumes moderated slightly from March, the sector's diversified market access and competitive product offerings continue to underpin healthy global growth, helping to offset any modest softness in the domestic market.

1Q26 global peer read-throughs: Caterpillar (30 April) and Cummins (5 May) reinforce the global upcycle, with strong machinery and AIDC demand outlooks

- Caterpillar's 1Q26 results highlighted a strong start to the year, with sales and revenues up 22% Y/Y, to $17.4B, and a record backlog of $63B (+79% Y/Y). Management raised the full-year outlook to low-double-digit sales growth, citing resilient end markets and robust order activity across all segments. Machinery demand remains healthy, with Construction Industries sales up 38% Y/Y and North America supported by infrastructure and data center investment. Caterpillar is also seeing accelerating demand for large engines and AIDC (AI Data Center) power solutions, with new orders for over 2GW of gas generator sets for data centers and a plan to triple large engine capacity by 2030. Management expects continued growth in both prime and backup power, with data center and mining customers driving long-term secular demand.

- Cummins' 1Q26 results also point to a positive global cycle, with sales up 3% Y/Y, to $8.4B, and EBITDA margin at 17.7% (ex one-time items). Cummins reported Q1 revenues in China up 19% Y/Y, to $2.1B, with heavy and medium-duty truck industry demand up 20% Y/Y (353k units) and Cummins' own sales up 14% Y/Y (55k units), mainly on strong export demand. Cummins maintained a cautious full-year China HDT outlook (down 10% to flat), but Q1 was a clear beat. Cummins also raised its 2026 North America heavy-duty truck forecast to 230k-250k units from 220k-240k, and now expects total company revenues to rise 8-11% for the year. The company is also seeing accelerating demand for power generation equipment, especially for data centers, and is investing in AIDC-related capacity. Management highlighted that China's data center build-out and export demand are key drivers, and it expects global construction demand to be flat to up 10% Y/Y, with mining engine sales flat to up 10%.

Share price performance review

Share price performance across the China HDT and machinery sector remains bifurcated despite robust operational momentum and upgraded outlooks, with market sentiment still lagging the improving fundamentals. Our conviction in Weichai Power, Sany Heavy, XCMG and Hengli Hydraulic as top picks is reinforced by their strong execution, margin expansion and exposure to electrification, mining and global infrastructure cycles. Weichai Power's AIDC/data center engine story and Sany's global mining and electrification push continue to set them apart, while XCMG and Hengli Hydraulic are well positioned for the next leg of the upcycle, in our view. Zhejiang Dingli remains our least preferred pick, given its limited near-term catalysts and recent volatility.

- Share price performance has been mixed across the sector YTD. Weichai Power-H (+121%) and Weichai Power-A (+95%) have delivered strong gains, reflecting robust earnings delivery, margin expansion and positive sentiment around electrification and export growth. SANY Heavy-A and SANY Heavy-H have posted modest gains of 3-4%, while XCMG and Zoomlion-A are down 5%. In contrast, global peers Caterpillar (+57%) and Cummins (+33%) have outperformed, benefiting from defensive flows and margin resilience. The MSCI World Industrial Index is up 12% YTD, highlighting the relative underperformance of most China machinery names, which is largely attributable to profit-taking, macro risk-off sentiment and investor caution around policy and commodity price volatility.

- The sector has seen a clear divergence in share price performance over the past month. Weichai Power-A (+24%) and Weichai Power-H (+26%) have continued to outperform, while Zhejiang Dingli (+16%), Jiangsu Hengli (+12%) and SANY Heavy-A (+6%) have also posted solid gains. However, Zoomlion-H (-9%) and Zoomlion-A (-6%) have come under pressure, reflecting ongoing volatility and rotation within the sector. Global leaders Caterpillar (+14%) and Cummins (+10%) have outpaced the MSCI World Industrial Index (+2%), underscoring the market's preference for defensives amid uncertainty.
- We believe the sector's recent share price weakness is not justified by fundamentals. We expect renewed investor focus on operational execution and structural growth drivers as policy clarity, pricing power and a global demand recovery play out through 2026. Our preference order remains unchanged: Weichai Power as our top pick, followed by Sany Heavy, XCMG and Hengli Hydraulic, with Zhejiang Dingli as our least preferred name.
